the creativity workshop

The Creativity Workshop has helped writers of all genres jumpstart and renew their imagination and avoid writers' block.

We will teach you ways to keep your writing fresh and inspired.

In this workshop you will generate both new work and seeds for the work you are in the midst of creating. We use many different techniques to help you find your way through the novel, essay, poem, memoir, or script you are writing or hope to write. In the Creativity Workshop you will be doing free writing, writing from guided visualizations, collaborative writing, journaling and memoir work and even some rudimentary drawing, collage and photography.

We go back and forth between writing, visual and oral exercises and oral exercises because they stimulate different parts of the mind and body. We believe that getting out of your writers' head for a few moments and into a bit of art and oral storytelling keeps the writing from getting stale. It also combats the kind of perfectionism that keeps you from writing at all.

"I wrote my first published memoir because of this class. The instructors are magicians! They gently pushed us into discovering our unique creativity."

Carroll Blue, Author of the memoir "The Dawn at my Back" and Professor Emerita of Film Studies, San Diego State University, CA
