“This meticulously edited volume offers a less-traveled, lambent path into Bharati Mukherjee’s work, reintroducing the writer through her lifelong experiments with the short story genre. An immersion in the elusive meanings and restlessly shifting perspectives and settings of Mukherjee’s short stories invites reconsideration of her craft and concerns. Gathering together for the first time the unpublished short stories from her MFA thesis, alongside stories from her published but out-of-print later collections, as well as individually published pieces from throughout her career, this volume will surprise and stir Mukherjee admirers and critics of Mukherjee alike.”
